ALEX’S NEXT-ROLE BRIEF

A clearer path to your next role.

Your experience has more than one direction. Here are two worth exploring, and the reasons behind each recommendation.

ONE USEFUL DECISION AT A TIME

Start with the work you can demonstrate. Check the gaps. Choose your next step.

This sample shows the proposed service. In a paid pilot, a person would review your brief and check the vacancy sources.

YOUR STARTING POINT

A

Alex Morgan

Fictional example profile

8 years in customer service.
2 years leading a support team.

- ✓ Led a team of 9 and planned weekly cover.
- ✓ Coordinated escalations across teams.
- ✓ Reported service measures using Excel and Zendesk.
- ✓ Improved repeat-contact rates by 18%.

All examples above are invented for this demo. No B2B SaaS or SQL experience is recorded.

Minimum annual salary · GBP

£40,000

Remote roles only

Otherwise: Leeds, with up to 2 office days a week. Full-time. UK work eligibility is assumed only for this fictional example.

Try changing a constraint. The recommendations should change for a reason you can see.

TWO DIRECTIONS TO EXPLORE

Build on what you already know.

These are role hypotheses to test against real vacancies.

DIRECTION 01

Service delivery coordination

Your escalation handling, team scheduling and reporting may transfer to coordinating a service.

Check sector-specific requirements and whether formal project qualifications are essential.

DIRECTION 02

Customer operations

Your process improvements and service measures may support an operations-focused move.

Look for SQL, systems administration or commercial requirements that need separate evidence.

ILLUSTRATIVE OPPORTUNITIES

Fewer roles. Clearer reasons.

Pursue means worth considering. It does not predict an interview.

Service delivery coordinator

Northline Services · fictional employer

PURSUE

£40,000–£46,000 | Leeds · 2 office days | Full-time

Why: The stated pay and working pattern fit. Your example tasks support the core requirements; sector knowledge still needs checking with the employer.

▼ See the evidence and gaps

- Escalation coordination maps to the sample requirement to resolve cross-team service issues.
- Excel service reporting supports the sample reporting requirement.
- Weekly cover planning is relevant to coordination; it is not evidence of formal project management.

Fictional vacancy · no employer URL or live status check. A real brief would show both.

NEXT ACTION

Prepare one example of coordinating an escalation, then confirm the sector requirements.

Customer success specialist

Meadow Software · fictional employer

INVESTIGATE

£42,000–£48,000 | UK remote | Full-time

Why: Required B2B SaaS experience is not evidenced.

▼ See the evidence and gaps

- Customer communication and Zendesk use are relevant supporting experience.
- This fictional advert requires 2 years of B2B SaaS experience. Alex's profile does not establish this.
- No evidence is recorded of renewals or commercial account ownership.

Fictional vacancy · no employer URL or live status check. A real brief would show both.

NEXT ACTION

Ask whether broader customer-service experience can meet the essential SaaS requirement.

Customer operations lead

Fieldwork Group · fictional employer

SKIP

£42,000–£50,000 | Leeds · 3 office days | Full-time

Why: The role requires more than your maximum of two office days.

▼ See the evidence and gaps

- Leading 9 people supports the example's people-management requirement.
- Service reporting and process improvement are relevant examples.
- Three required office days exceed Alex's two-day limit.

Fictional vacancy · no employer URL or live status check. A real brief would show both.

NEXT ACTION

Skip unless the employer confirms an acceptable working pattern; do not assume flexibility.

Operations administrator

Harbour Office Services · fictional employer

SKIP

£30,000–£34,000 | Leeds · 2 office days | Full-time

Why: The advertised maximum is below your £40,000 minimum.

▼ See the evidence and gaps

- Scheduling and Excel reporting are relevant to the sample duties.
- The advertised salary is £30,000–£34,000.
- Whether a move away from leadership is desirable would need a conversation.

Fictional vacancy · no employer URL or live status check. A real brief would show both.

NEXT ACTION

Check whether the pay and scope make sense before spending time on an application.

A MANAGEABLE NEXT STEP
